Participants will gain valuable skills and knowledge about:

- the theory behind men's use of violence in relationships;
- develop & practice interventions skills for working with men in group and individual settings;
- connect with other practitioners in your field and region;
- gain confidence in engaging in complex work with often involuntary clients.

Facilitator: Dave Misso

Dave is a Counselling Psychologist with over 30 years experience having worked in both the public and private sectors, and is one of the Directors of Misso Psychology & Consulting. Prior to commencing private practice in 2004 Dave managed one of Australia's largest counselling agencies and occupied key advisory positions for Australian state and federal governments, including membership on the Queensland Domestic Violence Council. Dave incorporates systems theory, narrative therapy, solution focused brief therapy, cognitive behaviour therapy, mindfulness, sensorimotor approaches and modern consciousness research in his therapeutic practice, training and supervision. He is currently the chair for the Australian Psychological Society College of Counselling Psychologists (Qld). He is also conducting post-graduate research exploring personality and metacognition in perpetrators of domestic violence.
