

Federal funding for community legal centres welcomed

Felicity CaldwellShow commentsSHARETWEETMORE

Fears increasing numbers of desperate Queenslanders would be turned away from community legal centres amid funding cuts have been quashed after a last-minute reprieve.

The federal government was due to effectively take $35 million from the sector, which gives free legal help to disadvantaged and vulnerable people in 190 centres across Australia, under funding arrangements due to start on July 1.

Federal Attorney-General George Brandis has announced more funding for community legal centres across the country. Photo: Andrew Mearns

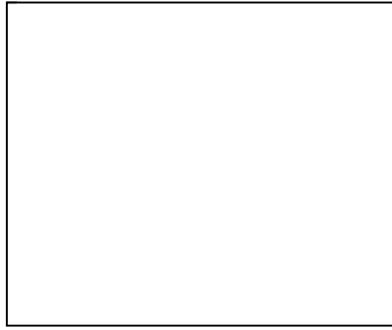

Advertisement

However, on Monday, federal Attorney-General George Brandis pledged $55.7 million in extra funding over the next three years, to be confirmed in the May budget.

The 11th-hour win comes after months of campaigning from lawyers, Labor and state governments.

The funding includes $39 million for community legal centres – prioritising family law and domestic violence services – and $16.7 million for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Legal Services.

The federal government is describing it as the "largest ever Commonwealth investment in legal assistance services", totalling $1.73 billion.

Advertisement

The funding allocation will be finalised with states and territories under the National Partnership Agreement.

Community Legal Centres Queensland director James Farrell said the announcement meant access to justice would be available to everyone, no matter the "size of their bank account".

"Community legal centres will be able to continue providing legal help to women leaving violent relationships, parents struggling to care for their children, workers who aren't paid or are unfairly sacked, tenants threatened with illegal evictions and older people whose financial assets are taken by their carers," Mr Farrell said.

But Mr Farrell said ongoing uncertainty about the "funding cliff" meant some services had already been significantly reduced.

"Queensland's community legal centres were forced to turn away half of the people who reached out for help last year, so the last thing that Queenslanders needed was a reduction in the services available to help them solve their legal problems," he said.

Queensland Attorney-General Yvette D'Ath welcomed the funding but questioned why it took so long to be announced.

"I am relieved that George Brandis has listened to reason, but the uncertainty has been deeply troubling for centres who have had to turn vulnerable people away," Ms D'Ath said.

Earlier this month, the Palaszczuk government announced $51.3 million in combined state and federal government funding for 36 Queensland community legal centres over the next three financial years.

That included funding the volunteer-run LGBTI Legal Service for the first time.

Women's Legal Service Queensland chief executive Angela Lynch said services were in a desperate situation across the country and were grateful that cuts were being reversed.

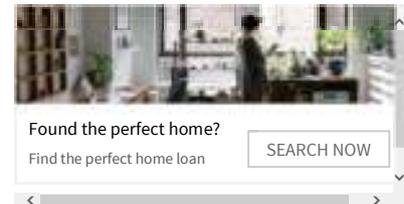

"Already 50 per cent of calls to our helpline go unanswered," she said.

"At current capacity and demand levels we are predicting 9000 missed calls in 2017.

"Not just maintaining, but increasing funding to services like ours is so critical – it really can be the difference between life and death for many women and children."

MOST POPULAR

- 1 Meet the Brisbane priest who created Anzac Day as we know it
- 2 Family watched goalkeeper die after 'massive heart attack' on Brisbane pitch
- 3 Cairns business flooded with complaints after posting sign about Israelis
- 4 Backlash for 'no Israelis' sign comes 10 years after it was displayed
- 5 Body of woman, 90, found washed up on beach after fishing trip

PROPERTY NEWS

What clearance rates really mean when ...

How to instantly update the look of ...

FOLLOW BRISBANE TIM...

In March, the WLSQ received the largest number of calls to its domestic violence helpline since it opened – with more than 1500 incoming calls for help.

Queensland Council for Civil Liberties president Michael Cope said the federal government should go further and find long-term sources of funding.

Mr Cope suggested possible sources of funding, such as a special industry levy on alcohol and gambling, a speeding fine levy or a high income corporation levy.

YOU MIGHT LIKE

When is the right time to sell shares?

COMMSEC SPONSORED

RECOMMENDED

-

Scuffy the pet dog killed in 'sickening' attack

NEWS

Can Investing in Infrastructure Help You Handle Market...

AMP CAPITAL
-

Not just dateless, desperate too: Why Ten needs Sophie Monk and...

ENTERTAINMENT

If Your Mortgage Doesn't Start With a 3, Read This

HOME LOANS AUSTRALIA
-

Rihanna And Lupita Nyong'o Say They'll Make The Movie...

HUFFINGTON POST

Red Rooster's 12 Cheesy Nuggets for $5 is back!

RED ROOSTER
-

Backlash for 'no Israelis' sign comes 10 years after...

NEWS

Home loans have never been this easy.

HOME LOAN REPORT
-

Elon Musk posts photo with new girlfriend Amber Heard on the...

LIFESTYLE

It's playtime in the new Ford Escape SUV.

FORD

powered by plista

0 comments

LOG IN TO COMMENT

New User? Sign up

Sort comments by Oldest

MOST VIEWED TODAY

QUEENSLAND

Cairns business flooded with complaints after posting sign about

Family watched goalkeeper die after 'massive heart attack' on

Backlash for 'no Israelis' sign comes 10 years after it was

Scruffy the pet dog killed in 'sickening' attack

'Who could do this?' Scruffy's owners beg for help after dead dog

Elon Musk posted an intimate photo with girlfriend Amber Heard

Cairns business flooded with complaints after posting sign about

How a teen's pregnancy to her teacher's husband changed her life

Family watched goalkeeper die after 'massive heart attack' on

I spent three years paying someone else's tolls

Elon Musk posted an intimate photo with girlfriend Amber Heard

North Korea highlights 1250 US marines in Darwin to warn of

Drone footage shows shark feeding frenzy in Port Stephens bay

Dancer and teacher's aide Sergio Montoya jailed for child porn

Marine Le Pen steps down as party leader

PRODUCTS AND SERVICES

- AM Edition
- PM Edition
- Good Food Guide
- Newsletters

BRISBANE TIMES

- Sitemap
- About Us
- Contact Us
- Advertise With Us
- Text Version
- Site Accessibility Guide

CLASSIFIEDS

- Classifieds & Notices
- Cars
- Dating
- Jobs
- Real Estate
- Commercial Real Estate
- Oneflare
- Nabo

OUR SITES

- SMH
- The Age
- AFR.com
- Adzuna
- Domain
- Drive
- RSVP
- Essential Baby
- Home Price Guide
- Weatherzone

WEBSITE FEEDBACK

