

News Sport Business World Politics Comment Property Entertainment Lifestyle Travel CQueensland National Environment Health Education Galleries Good Weekend NSW News Victoria News / Brisbane Weather Brisbane Traffic QuizzesHome / News / Queensland

JULY 17 2017

SAVE PRINT LICENSE ARTICLE

Push for compensation to be available for men with expunged gay sex convictions

Felicity Caldwell

Show commentsSHARETWEETMORE

Men charged with historic gay offences like indecency should receive compensation, advocacy and legal groups have argued.

Groups including the Human Rights Law Centre said a proposed scheme to wipe historical gay convictions from people's records should also allow for appropriate and fair compensation.

Alan Raabe was one of hundreds of gay men to have their Queensland criminal records expunged. Photo: Robert Shakespeare

"Clause 5(2) of the bill currently provides no entitlement to compensation," their joint submission to a Parliamentary committee reads.

An advertisement for Workday. At the top, the text 'Does your finance system measure up to today's expectations?' is displayed in blue. Below it is an orange button with the text 'Learn more'. The main part of the ad shows a tablet displaying a financial dashboard with various charts and graphs. At the bottom, the Workday logo is shown with the tagline 'Built for the future.'.

Advertisement

"We acknowledge that no other states or territories have currently provided for compensation to people who have been unjustly convicted under historical homosexual offences.

"However, international best practice is to provide for such a measure in order to repair damaged relationships and assist in restoring individuals to the position they were in prior to the conviction."

The group, also including the Community Legal Centres Queensland, LGBTI Legal Service and Queensland AIDS Council, said Germany had committed to annul 50,000 convictions for men charged with historic offences and provide compensation.

TRAVELLING SOLO?
SAVE UP TO $6,178

BOOK NOW >>

Advertisement

"The level and nature of compensation for individuals should have regard to the value of any fines paid and the length of detention ... as well as the psychological and other impacts on victims," they said.

In May, Premier Annastacia Palaszczuk apologised to people who were charged with the historic offences and the government introduced a bill for an expungement scheme.

SPENCER HOWSON AM / PM NEWSLETTER

Get the latest news and updates emailed straight to your inbox.

Enter your email address

SIGN UP

By submitting your email you are agreeing to Fairfax Media's terms and conditions and privacy policy.

The scheme will allow people to apply for certain convictions and charges to be wiped from their criminal record if they occurred before January 19, 1991, when consensual adult male gay activity stopped being a criminal offence in Queensland.

Until then, people could be charged with offences ranging from indecency, to unnatural offences and sodomy.

But, despite no longer being a crime, many men were still forced to admit they had a criminal record when applying for a job or trying to travel overseas.

LGBTI Legal Service executive director Emile McPhee said consequences for people charged also ranged from fines to imprisonment.

MOST POPULAR

- 1 Chief Magistrate refers Facebook photos of DV court to police
- 2 New technology trial takes aim at Brisbane shoplifters
- 3 Queensland's public service grows by 3000 in three months
- 4 Manhunt after victim was shot repeatedly outside home
- 5 Staff in MPs' electorate offices have turnover of 30 per cent

Need a Credit Card?

Access exclusive credit card offers

COMPARE NOW

PROPERTY NEWS

If Sydney was a city of 100 homes, ...

The six items you'll find in every ...

FOLLOW BRISBANE TIMES

Mr McPhee said he did not think there should be a blanket ban on people seeking compensation and it should be considered on a case-by-case basis.

He said there was unlikely to be a "flood gate" of people applying for expungement and some may choose not to come forward.

"They may have passed away and their family is not interested in going through that, and it may be something that is still a really difficult thing for those people to open up about," he said.

"It might be something they'd prefer to keep in the past, as much as we'd love to assist them [in applying for expungement]."

It is estimated that over 95 years, 464 people were charged under the laws.

But the Department of Justice and Attorney-General estimated it would receive a maximum of 20 applications over the initial two years of the scheme, at a cost of $5000 per application – $100,000 over two years.

No other states or territories have provided for compensation to people who had historical gay offences expunged.

The department advised people would not be entitled to compensation just because their charge or conviction was expunged.

But if the person had some other legal cause of action that arose out of the same facts that gave rise to the expungement, the new laws would not extinguish that cause of action, the department said.

A spokeswoman for Attorney-General Yvette D'Ath said the bill did not allow entitlements to compensation as this was not considered within the Queensland Law Reform Commission's report into the matter.

"At the time these historic charges were laid, police at the time were considered to be enforcing the law of the day," the spokeswoman said.

"Compensation provides are also not part of Victoria's legislation and are not part of a similar bill before Tasmanian Parliament."

The spokeswoman said the government made history earlier this year when it formally apologised to members of the LGBTI community and acknowledged the harm that was inflicted on people when homosexuality was considered a criminal offence.

The Legal Affairs and Community Safety Committee, chaired by Duncan Pegg, recommended the bill be passed.

However, the committee was unable to agree that "public morality" offences be included because it was not recommended by the Queensland Law Reform Commission.

Non-government members also believed the scheme would be improved by including a process of consultation that involved any other party involved – who was not the applicant for an expungement – particularly when issues of consent were in question.

RECOMMENDED

powered by plista

NEWS

Woman found dead at a Melbourne buck's party was 'member of ADF'

ENTERTAINMENT

Game of Thrones fans mock 'painful' Ed Sheeran cameo

HUFFINGTON POST

Senate's New Plan To Repeal But Not Replace Obamacare Is Dead

NEWS

Police officer who shot Justine Damond had less than two years' experience

FROM THE WEB

HOME LOAN REPORT

New Online Tool to find out your Borrowing Limit

TNZ

Discover lakes surrounded by ancient stories in NZ's North Island

LIFE INSURANCE COMPARISON

Over 40 with Life Insurance? You need to read this

TRIVAGO

NEW deal: Port Douglas Hotels from $99

SMSF

Prepare for the SMSF advice year ahead

VIVA ENERGY

Synthetic lubricant tech keeps auto workshops running

0 commentsLOG IN TO COMMENTNew User? Sign upSort comments by Oldest

MOST VIEWED TODAY

QUEENSLAND

Staff in MPs' electorate offices have turnover of 30 per cent

Chief Magistrate refers Facebook photos of DV court to police

Dog attack leaves young girl with serious face injuries

New technology trial takes aim at Brisbane shoplifters

Queensland's public service grows by 3000 in three months

Bodies of Swiss couple found on glacier 75 years after they went

Staff in MPs' electorate offices have turnover of 30 per cent

'Im not an idiot': Senators react to Greens resignation

Second Greens senator forced to resign over dual citizenship

'Rainbow scarf man': Brisbane councillor attracts national

Fancy buying your chicken from a rusty trolley?

'Im not an idiot': Senators react to Greens resignation

Second Greens senator forced to resign over dual citizenship

Bodies of Swiss couple found on glacier 75 years after they went

Cop who shot Sydney woman only joined force in 2015

PRODUCTS AND SERVICES

- AM Edition
- PM Edition
- Good Food Guide

BRISBANE TIMES

- Sitemap
- About Us
- Contact Us
- Advertise With Us
- Text Version
- Site Accessibility Guide
- Privacy Policy
- Conditions of Use

CLASSIFIEDS

- Classifieds & Notices
- Cars
- Dating
- Jobs
- Real Estate
- Commercial Real Estate
- Oneflare
- Nabo

OUR SITES

- SMH
- The Age
- AFR.com
- Adzuna
- Domain
- Drive
- RSVP
- Essential Baby
- Home Price Guide
- Weatherzone

WEBSITE FEEDBACK