

News Sport Business World Politics Comment Property Entertainment Lifestyle Travel C

Looking for quality land at a reasonable price in Townsville?

Click for our tenants' stories

BOHLE
INDUSTRIAL ESTATE

Ironment Health Education Galleries Good Weekend NSW News Victoria News ACT News QueenslandBrisbane Weather Brisbane Traffic QuizzesHome / News / Queensland

FEBRUARY 6 2018 - 10:22AM

SAVE PRINT LICENSE ARTICLE

Human rights set to be enshrined in a Queensland act

Felicity Caldwell27 reading now Show commentsSHARETWEETMORE

Freedom of expression and a right to privacy will soon be specifically guaranteed in Queensland under a human rights act.

Australia does not have a national Bill of Rights like the US, but the Palaszczuk government has confirmed it will keep its commitment to introduce a human rights act.

The Palaszczuk government will introduce a human rights act for Queensland. Photo: Louie Douvis

"The government is currently working through its legislative agenda for the coming term," a spokeswoman for Attorney-General Yvette D'Ath told Fairfax Media.

"The Attorney-General will be working with key stakeholders and across government to finalise the development of a proposed bill to deliver on this commitment."

RELATED ARTICLES

Probe into Human Rights Act

The Queensland act will be modelled on the Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act, introduced in 2006.

That includes a right to life, protection from torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, freedom from forced work, freedom of movement, privacy and reputation, freedom of expression and peaceful assembly and freedom of association.

Advertisement

During a 2016 inquiry into a possible human rights act, the

Advertisement

MOST POPULAR

- 1 Tim Minchin to launch Gold Coast arts precinct with free concert
- 2 Refugee who escaped Taliban awarded almost $2 million after workplace injury
- 3 Shortlist of Cross River Rail consortia to be announced within a month
- 4 Man dies after being pinned underneath vehicle in Sunshine Coast workplace accident
- 5 Woman dies, two airlifted to hospital with serious injuries after crash south of Gympie

Queensland Law Society submitted both "for" and "against" arguments, to reflect its members' views.

The "against" argument said a human rights act was unnecessary, including because many of the rights – such as not to be tortured or enslaved, and property rights – were protected by existing criminal and common law.

An act could also impose extra layers of regulations, more costs and some rights contradicted each other, the submission argued.

"One person's right to free speech is an infringement of another person's right to privacy or reputation," it said.

Queensland Law Society president Ken Taylor said the issue had been hotly debated.

"The introduction of such an act should encourage the community to be aware and more respectful of human rights ... There's opposing views of whether or not such an act would lead to more litigation," he said.

Community Legal Centres Queensland director James Farrell said there was no reason to delay the "sensible and important reform" now Labor held government in its own right.

Mr Farrell said previous experiences, particularly Victoria and the ACT, demonstrated human rights law could have a profound impact, including on the delivery of government services.

"Victoria and the ACT have had human rights laws for years, and we've seen stronger protection for people with disability, families threatened with homelessness, women and children experiencing family violence, and many other groups in the community," he said.

"When governments have to take into account human rights, then the laws they make, the services they deliver and the way the courts operate are improved."

Mr Farrell said the laws would have to be supported by training and support for service providers and authorities.

A Human Rights Act for Queensland campaign co-ordinator Aimee McVeigh said it could take 18 months to introduce a human rights act, including a transition period to reform the way government services were delivered.

"The Queensland government has made a commitment to introducing a human rights act this term and we're looking forward to the legislative process starting as soon as possible," she said.

Similarly, Queensland Council for Civil Liberties president Michael Cope said the government should "get on with" introducing the bill.

"So far as we can tell, Victoria has not fallen into hell or another such bad place because it has such an act," he said.

"Disabled people, homeless people have had their rights improved – that is the evidence very strongly.

"I think the Victorian experience is it will make a difference to the daily lives of the most disadvantaged people in the state."

Mr Cope said an example included someone being able to argue a nursing home should not open their mail, because of their right to privacy.

The path to a human rights act in Queensland

It has been a long road for Queensland.

The Legal, Constitutional and Administrative committee considered the issue in Queensland in 1998.

Former independent MP Peter Wellington called for a human rights act during the Newman government years in the wake of anti-association laws, and investigating a bill of rights was one of the things the Palaszczuk government agreed to with Mr Wellington in 2015 in exchange for his support on confidence motions.

At the 2015 Labor state conference, members voted unanimously to seek a parliamentary inquiry into a Queensland bill of rights.

In mid-2016, the parliamentary inquiry received almost 500

Find top rated local businesses
Australia's largest business reviews website

SEARCH NOW

PROPERTY NEWS

Rapid-fire release of apartments causes ...

Triple whammy causes house prices to ...

FOLLOW WA TODAY

Choose your address
Choose your home
It's so easy!

Click here to find out more submissions, and was unable to agree on whether human rights legislation should be introduced.

Government members of the committee were in favour, while non-government members were of the opposite view, arguing society's issues could be better addressed by targeted legislation or policies.

At the 2016 Labor state conference, Premier Anastacia Palaszczuk revealed cabinet had agreed to introduce a human rights act for Queensland, modelled on the Victorian charter.

Originally published on brisbanetimes.com.au as 'Human rights set to be enshrined in a Queensland act'.

YOU MIGHT LIKE

The Land Rover Main Event is now on LAND ROVER SPONSORED

RECOMMENDED

powered by plista

NEWS
Ban on the most Australian symbol of them all an outrage

DOMAIN.COM.AU
Road to recovery: Buyers in regional WA 'not going to lose money'

DOMAIN.COM.AU
The million dollar Perth suburbs savvy buyers are getting into now

ENTERTAINMENT
I'm A Celebrity's great Anthony Mundine-Danny Green rivalry is hard to swallow

FROM THE WEB

BHP BILLITON
BHP Thinks big and supports young Australians

MITSUBISHI
Mitsubishi Pajero Sport on sale now in the 2017 Plate Clearance

TIGER AIRWAYS
Summer with mates made better with Tigerair. Book today!

MOZO
Why Smart Aussies Are Dumping Banks for Online Loans

CARNIVAL CRUISES
What type of food will you find on a cruise?

HONG KONG TOURISM
Shop, eat, play, repeat in Hong Kong

0 comments

LOG IN TO COMMENT

New User? Sign up

Sort comments by Oldest

MOST VIEWED TODAY

QUEENSLAND

Proposed GST changes could cost Queensland $1.59 billion

Refugee who escaped Taliban awarded almost $2 million after

Man dies after being pinned underneath vehicle in Sunshine

Psychologist charged with assaulting women released on bail

Shortlist of Cross River Rail consortia to be announced within a

WA builder signals cashflow trouble, subcontractors stop work

Out of site: How FIFO swings bring home an invisible cost to WA

Teacher of prestigious Perth private school 'accidentally'

Claremont Hotel joins the great Perth beer war with $5 beers

Bunnings' UK woes deepen with $1 billion writedown

Crocodile Dundee tourism ad airs at Super Bowl in US

Seven charged over abuse at Katoomba circus school: police

'Rose Bay is full': Why every corner of Sydney is worried about

Wall Street has biggest one-day fall in six years

Paul Lau died at Sydney hospital after wrongly being prescribed

PRODUCTS AND SERVICES

AM Edition
PM Edition
Good Food Guide

WA TODAY

Sitemap
About Us
Contact Us
Advertise With Us
Text Version
Site Accessibility Guide
Privacy Policy
Conditions of Use

CLASSIFIEDS

Classifieds & Notices
Cars
Dating
Jobs
Real Estate
Commercial Real Estate
Oneflare
Nabo

OUR SITES

SMH
The Age
AFR.com
Adzuna
Domain
Drive
RSVP
Essential Baby
Home Price Guide
Weatherzone

WEBSITE FEEDBACK