

Queensland's new Human Rights Act

What it means for your organisation and clients

Thursday 19 September, 10am

Community legal centres, community, health and education workers are invited to participate in a free legal information webinar about the new Human Rights Act.

This webinar is a collaboration between the Queensland Human Rights Commission (QHRC), Community Legal Centres Queensland (CLCQ) and Legal Aid Queensland (LAQ).

Presented by Deborah Keenan, director, Complaint Management (QHRC), Janelle Rees, sector sustainability coordinator (CLCQ) and Matilda Alexander, senior lawyer, Human Rights and Anti-Discrimination (LAQ), this webinar will cover:

- an introduction to the Act and the complaints process
- which rights are protected
- case studies (including application to vulnerable groups)
- live Q&A.

We encourage you to submit any questions for our presenters ahead of the webinar in the registration form.

The webinar will be recorded, captioned and published on our legal information webinars for community workers playlist on YouTube. The handout will be emailed after the webinar date to everyone who registers.

For information on upcoming webinars, please check our Information for community workers and carers page. You can also find useful information about how to get legal help for your clients and other useful services.

For more information please phone 07 3917 0406 or email community.legaled@legalaid.qld.gov.au

You can connect to the webinar session audio via computer audio (VoIP) or via telephone (call costs apply). Visit the GoToWebinar website for information about connecting to webinar session audio.
